Art lovers: find new work at Summer Art Market!

DENVER – Art lovers will find some of the best local artists' work at the Art Students League of Denver's Summer Art Market, Saturday and Sunday, June 12 and 13, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 200 Grant Street, Denver.

The Summer Art Market, known as a great event for new as well as seasoned art collectors, showcases work by more than 250 artists, from emerging to professional. All artists are involved in the Art Students League's community art school as members, students, or faculty.

"This is a fun place to look for art," said Eva Kovach, a regular visitor, who likes the festive atmosphere. "Prices are great and there is some exceptional work. I like to know that I'm supporting my community by purchasing work from local artists."

Many artists exhibit their newest work in the tradition of many notable local artists who in years past sold their earliest work at the event. Money earned from art sales goes directly to the artist, while proceeds from the event support the Art Students League, a 501(c) 3 nonprofit organization.

Traditional, abstract and contemporary styles abound in a wide range of media, including paintings, sculptures, ceramics, drawing and mixed media. These reflect the League's fine arts curriculum, taught year-round by professional working artists with established careers.

"The public gets a first-hand look at our apprenticeship approach to instruction," said Leona Lazar, League executive director. "Our unique small-class and open studio method gives each student support where they need it."

Visitors can also enjoy live music, food, free kids art activities, and free adult art classes. For a full list of exhibiting artists and additional information, please visit <http://www.ASLD.org/summerartmarket.php>.
